

Parents in Conflict Programming.

Parents in Conflict (PIC) focuses on providing psycho-educational programming that teaches parents how to get past personal conflicts with each other in order to focus on the needs of their children. Though they have chosen not to be a couple, they must learn ways to work with each other in order to provide the guidance, nurturing and general needs of the children.

Parents learn ways to:

- Make better decisions for their children.
- Focus on the needs of children-not on the cause of their marital problems.
- Gain insight into the needs of children and how their behaviors affect their children both positively and negatively.
- Find solutions: We focus not on marital issues that lead to the separation but on finding solutions to the co-parenting issues.

Why Parents in Conflict?

Separating, breaking up or divorcing is tough on families. Couples who were never married go through many of the same issues as those who were; the main difference is that they often end the relationship without court involvement. Whether the parents were married or not, Parents in Conflict (PIC) can help.

Parents in conflict is:

Solution focused- We focus on ways to improve the communication of the parents so they can work together to meet the needs of the children.

Focused on the here and now- We do not focus on the cause or reasons for divorce, our concern is to make a difference today, so that tomorrow can be better.

Non Judgmental- We do not take sides in PIC; sessions are conducted with both parties present.

Personalized- PIC is custom designed for each family in order to meet their specific needs.

Flexible- PIC's length varies according to need, usually 5-10 sessions.

Ongoing- PIC offers additional services after completion if needed.

General counseling services are also available.
